Highlights

- Paired Monte Carlo tests carbon and durability claims for shell-derived concrete
- Published scallop-shell data reject an inert-filler strength model
- Calibrated filler efficiency lifts pavement joint-advantage odds to about 1 in 4
- Marine culvert shows no joint advantage; chloride transport stays uncalibrated
- Code, tests and results are openly archived on GitHub and Zenodo